army, wallops mules in the following style:

Writing of horses, by an easy Athenian transition I pase to mules: an Eastern paper reads me out of Christendom because I implied that the "frish rabbit" was not much to be pitted for the hard usuage it received, and because I did not have "a follow feeling "as a had, and asserts that the mule it one of the Lord's creatures. I do not believe it. I have no tides that the Lord made the mule as all. Look at him and it is plain enough. He is about as much a human invention as a wooden untimeg. By the by, I have not given you my experience a human invention as a wooden untimeg. By the by, I have not given you my experience a humleback. It is worth little, is of no public importance, and yet I am tempted to tell it. Is an evil hour I was persuaded to cuttrust myself to the vicious caprices of one of the most losily nificant creatures in the animal kingdom. Its care were "the chief end" of it, its tail was a miserable wisp, its mane was a worn-out shorbrush, and when mounted you were not personally taller than when standing upon your four feet.

Fancy this affant attached to a pair of Morters were with whele she is enough to you for the properties and the properties are the properties and the properties are the properties and the properties and the properties and the properties and the properties are the properties and the properties are the properties and the properties are the properties.

Fancy this afflant attached to a pair of Mortican spars with wheels hig enough to go by water, and equitably disposed on both sides of the brute. True, there was a leer in its right eye, but then its left ear was meekly depressed, and its nose was in the dust of humility, as it like some of its betters it ran by scent. Well, the thing got in motion, but in what direction it went, tike the response of the Delphic oracle, is an everlasting doubt. It is enough to say that as partial company, but I was two lengths ahead, and a third in a composite of red day and drivy water. When I looked back, the mule's fore feet were planted like a capital A, and both ears were pathetically depressed, but whether by an untimely reversing of the engine, the creature backed out and left me conchain, as the heralds have it, for whether it acted after the manner of a Roman catapult will not be known till Balaam again obeys the order to "boot and saddle" and Balaam's beast talks English. Fancy this affiant attached to a pair of Mer-to read carefully the following lines by a nephew of Bonedict Arnold, and originally published in the Loulon Mercing Chronicle, 1785:

Born for a curse to nature and mention.

Earth's broadest reals can't show as buck a mod, Night's sable vell your crimes can never tole. Each one so great would glit blatteric title. Defunct, your memory shall ever in a line place that this my can give curses of ages with attendy your care.

Curses of ages with attendy your manner.

Annight's encesance attendy alls to roll. Rivers of sulphur on your treacherous soul; Nature looks back with conscious error said. On such a tarnished plot as she has made to Hill receive your intend in deals.

Peter Cooper has just published another let ter to the President, in which occur the follow ing strong sentences:

I believe that the war of rebellion would have been short, if, at the commencement of the struggle, a decided policy in relation to the struggle, a decided policy in relation to the englewhent of negroes could have been adopted and sustained by the people of the North.

To prevent them from bringing upon our country and the world such a calamity, one Government will be fully justified to holding out every inducement to alaves of rebels to join our army to fight for their freedom and independence. The policy of employing the ungress in our defence, if I am not mistaken, is demanded by the highest interests of the South as well as by the North.

I believe that ten years will not pass before the people of the South will erect monuments to commemorate their deliverance from the bight of slavery.

I, for one, entry not the man who, to save a nation's life, will not say: "Perish, Sleevey—perish all that stants in the way go maintaining the free down and independence that our I can man intended to source."

Stonewalt, Jackson's Admission is to Hg.

STONEWALL JACKSON'S ADMISSION INTO HEAVES.—I was much amused at the ryde prisonies' account of Stonewall Jackson's admission into heaven. They were strong admirers of General Jackson, and especially of the great success of his dank inovements. "The darafter his death," said they, "two angels cannot have been applied to the prayer meeting, to the hospital, and to the prayer-meeting, to the hospital, and to every other place where they thought themselves they be not be prayer-meeting, to the hospital, and to every other place where they thought themselves highly of high limit of the prayer-meeting, to the hospital, and the every other place where they thought themselves highly of high limit of the prayer meeting to the hospital, and the every other place where they thought themselves held in the high limit of the place where they thought themselves to find him, but in value of the place where they thought themselves to find him to be all just executed a splendid flank movement and got into heaven before them." — "Any spond, Boston Recorder." At last accounts Cooper's forces were deciting rapidly towards the Red friver.
